Postal Telegraphy.

According to the report of the English postal telegraph system of 1880, the number of postal telegraph offices in the United Kingdom has increased to 5,331, and the number of messages transmitted to 26,347,137. Referring to these figures, a letter in a Toronto paper draws attention to the fact that in the Dominion of Canada the telegraph service, in proportion to the population, furnishes three times as many offices as are provided in Great Britain. As regards the messages transmitted, they are proportionately to population double those sent by the English system, while in the mileage of lines and wires the comparison is still greatly in favor of Canada. The rates for transmission of messages in the Dominion are much less, being only 20 cents as against 25 cents in England, while the distances are far greater. It is claimed for Canada that its telegraph system is superior to that of any other country in the world in extent of lines, facilities afforded, rates and number of messages transmitted in proportion to the population. The Montreal Company, of which Sir Hugh Allan is President, and which is the largest company in the Dominion, has rarely paid less than 10 per cent. per annum, and never less than 8 per cent.

An Arab Reply.

Temple Bar.

El Hejjaj ibn Yusuf, Governor of the two sacred cities of Mecca and Medina, under the Ottoman Empire, was one of the most bloodthirsty tyrants who ever lived, but even he sometimes heard the truth from the Arabs with whom he came in contact. One day he had gone on a little in advance of his guards, and falling in with an Arab said to him: "Oh, chief of the Arabs! What thinkest thou of El Hejjaj?" "He is a capricious tyrant," replied the other. "Have you complained of him to the Commander of the Faithful, Abd el Melik ibn Merwan?" asked El Hejjaj. "No," replied the Arab, "for he is even worse. Allah curse them both!" At this juncture the soldiers came up, and the Arab, taking in the situation at a glance, winked at his questioner, and cried: "Mild, Prince, that you disclose the secret which is between us to no one but Allah!" El Hejjaj laughed and dismissed him with a gift.

Who First Saw a Driven Well?

Troy Press.

A novel defense was set up in a driven well patent case in the United States Court at Syracuse the other day, in which suit a large number of residents of Troy and vicinity are directly interested. A preliminary injunction was asked against the owner of a well in Mendon, Monroe county. It was defended on the ground that the well was sunk in accordance with a process used by the Chinese, and which was almost as old as time. The citation of authorities to substantiate this completely staggered the attorney for the application, and the case was so well presented that the application for a preliminary injunction was denied. While this does not enjoin the owner of the well from using it, the question of whether or not this well was indeed sunk by a process as old as claimed, can still be controverted by proofs under the different patents. Should the defendant succeed in this showing, it will be a fine victory for the opponents of the Green patent.

Fate of the Reporters.

A question which has been often asked is well answered by the editor of the Indianapolis Sentinel. A lady of Indianapolis wrote the editor as follows: "I have often noticed that most newspaper reporters are young men. I never hear them spoken of after they become aged. The question that troubles me is what becomes of them?" To this inquiry the editor replies: All of those who have passed beyond the pearly gates of New Jerusalem are occupying front seats in the great chariot race for admission to the celestial throne. Some of them have starved to death while in the legitimate discharge of their duties. The profession has in some instances been brought into disrepute by some of its members having been sent to Congress. Others have turned out equally as bad, if not worse, by writing a book or lecturing.

A Guaranteed Umbrella.

London Public Opinion.

A firm of haters, who also sold umbrellas, gave written guarantees that certain of their silk umbrellas would not split with twelve months' wear. A buyer of one of these guaranteed umbrellas found that it split only after eight months' wear, and took it back to the shop, and the vendors promised to re-cover it, but afterward declined to do so, and handed it back to the buyer, who then brought an action against them. The vendors pleaded that the umbrella had not had fair wear, but the Judge said they were bound by the guarantee and gave judgment for the amount claimed, ten shillings.

RENO SEMINARIES.

Nevada is not very liberally supplied with educational institutions maintained by private enterprise. There is no academy in the State offering to equip boys with the advantages of a higher education than are offered by the public schools. The girls are better off. The schools maintained at Reno by the Episcopal and Roman Catholic churches are doing very well for them. Both of these seminaries, however, have a pretty severe struggle to maintain their own. The majority of the parents in Nevada who can afford to send their daughters to boarding schools are attracted by the inducements held out by the managers of such institutions in California. Still there are many who prefer to have their children nearer to their homes, and these constitute the principal patrons of the institutions at Reno. We have before us a catalogue of Bishop Whitaker's school for girls in that town. A glance at it shows the good work therein undertaken. This is commencement week in that school, and a few words in commendation of it are timely. The pupils number about seventy-eight young ladies. They come from all sections of Nevada, and we observe that several claim a residence in California. In the list are two from abroad. One hails from Valparaiso, Chili, and the other from St. Thomas. This fact is one of the highest tributes to the value of the school, and shows that its reputation is not circumscribed by State lines.

The above is from the Enterprise and seems to be well merited by both of the institutions named.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Rev. Cowley, of the Shepherd's Fold, of New York, who served a year in the penitentiary for starving the children, has been given a trial by Bishop Potter. The committee selected has spent six weeks to declare that Cowley should not have been punished as a felon, and ought not to be deposed from the ministry, and the Bishop will give him some minor position in the Church. The public will be delighted to hear that we are still to have our Cowley.

The Gold Hill News man is still loading around on the outskirts of scientific research and making faces at the standard bearers. He calls us "the Carle of the Reno Gazette," and sneers at some astronomical predictions lately made in this paper. It was always thus. Galileo, Herschel and Newton were bothered in the same way, and why not us? A mosquito can bite a king. Dotes is a worm in the path of progress, and we have stepped over him.

The Herald is the only paper among all the morning papers in New York sustaining the resigning Senators. The trio stands thus:

Platt,
Herald,
Conkling;

strongly suggestive of the old nursery rhyme:

Big at bottom—little at the top—
The thing in the middle goes whiffy whop.

On June 10th, 1861, First Lieutenant John T. Greble was killed at the little Bethel affair, and on June 10th, 1881, his son, Cadet John T. The elder Greble was the first commissioned officer killed in battle on the Union side. They are Philadelphians.

Postmaster-General James, in reply to expressions of fear that he may carry economy too far and thus cripple the postal service, says that there need be no fear whatever on his head. He fully appreciates the necessity for extending and improving the postal service, to enlarge the facilities for distribution of the mails in all sections of the country, but more especially in the large business centres.

Arthur McEwen, editor of the Virginia Chronicle, has been elected President of the Virginia Olympics, a club recently formed in Virginia. With hardened muscles he will make a renewed assault with the editorial club upon the Republican stone wall.

BY TELEGRAPH.

Another Grant Interview.

New York, June 21.
The Times has interviewed General Grant, who said he received Garfield's letter while in Mexico, in which he expressed such views respecting the position of Conkling and Platt towards the Administration as he now maintains. He had not yet had time to answer the letter, but would do so at length, as was most polite and friendly. In fact he had already begun to answer it. He did not feel that it was proper to give the letter for publication, but the President had his full consent to give both letters out. The letters would explain themselves. It was time to answer the public charge that he was inconsistent on the Senatorial question. He had consulted Sumner and Boutwell in appointing Simmons Collector of Boston, but Sumner put himself outside the pale of respect from the Administration by his treatment of it. Boutwell strongly supported Simmons, who was really a fine, competent officer. When Dawes and Hoar became Senators they demanded Simmons' removal, and he was removed, despite the protests of the business men of Boston, because of Senatorial courtesy.

The New Tichborne Claimant.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 21.
In connection with the case of the Tichborne claimant, now attracting attention here, a point has do-day arisen which would seem to go far in support of the claimant's pretensions. Tichborne states that he came to the United States after his visit to South America, following his departure from England, and married in Brooklyn, New York. This is altogether at variance with any of the disclosures made during the trial in England, and is, in fact, a new presentation of the matter. Now comes a gentleman, a mining engineer, well known in this city, who says that he was well acquainted with Tichborne in his youthful days in England, and that subsequently he met him in New York about the time of his marriage. This, it will be remembered, was many years before the affair came into prominence by virtue of the claim raised by Arthur Orton. The gentleman says if this is the real Tichborne he will be able to recognize him. He will undoubtedly be given an opportunity to do so on the return of Tichborne to this city.

The Star Route and Grand Jury.

WASHINGTON, June 21.
Judge Cox, in the Criminal Court, in delivering his charge to the Grand Jury to-day, said in reference to the Star routes, that their attention would probably be called to the postal laws. No charge had yet been brought before him in such a form as to enable him to speak definitely in relation to it or of the names of the persons involved. These matters were very important for the purity of the Government service, which should be maintained as far as possible by law; but in considering any charges, they must cast aside all bias or anything that would raise a presumption of malice on their part.

To-day at Albany.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

ALBANY, June 23.
In joint convention to-day the ballot for a Senator to fill the Conkling vacancy was as follows:

Jacobs, 52; Conkling, 32; Wheeler, 40; Lapham, 26; Cornell 20; Folger, 1; Bradley, 1; Rogers, 1. No choice.

Lawyer Tracy, who appeared in the place of Barg's counsel in the bribery investigation, urged a further adjournment until Thursday next. The suggestion was agreed to. Adjourned.

A German View of It.

Washington Star.
"Dot yellow Gonkling unt dis Blatt is ter most oreasonable yellow vot ever I saw; don't it?" said the philosophical German, as he sat at a cluster of fresh-filled glasses on the little table, just as the band stopped playing. "In ter verst blace, dey resigns of ter Senate, unt goes home to get ter Lechlislature to indorse him, unt ven dot Lechlislature intorse him, unt say 'Yes, dot vos all right vot you reason,' den py jinks, toy gits so mat apout it on you never saw. Dos vos a kaveer country, dis Americal! Py jinks, I don't enterstant him no more as a woman."

At Marshall, Texas, June 19th, Isaac Verge and Robert Dill had an altercation which led to a shooting affray, in which Verge was killed by Dill. The latter fled to the canebrakes, whither he was pursued by the Sheriff's posse, who called upon him to surrender. The posse then opened fire upon the desperado, killing him.

MOON'S MURDER.

Another Desperado Starts to Wade Across the Dark River With his Boots on.

The GAZETTE has received particulars in regard to the killing of Jim Moon, a well known gambler in Nevada. He lived in Reno for some time, and here is where his slayer first met Moon. The quarrel was over Moon's wife, whom he suspected of having improper relations with Wilson. On June 16th, the day before Cauty's hanging, Moon met Wilson and his friend Lundin in a saloon and spoke roughly to Lundin, slapping him in the face. Lundin seems to have been very forbearing, making no resentment to Moon's rough treatment. Moon then said to Clay Wilson:

"Do you want any of this?"

Mr. Wilson, it seems, made no reply, when Moon followed him up in a very abusive manner, making threatening gestures to draw his pistol. When near the folding doors, Wilson managed to get his pistol out of his pocket and at once commenced to blaze away at Moon, not giving him time to draw his pistol. The first two shots took effect in Moon's breast. Moon then climbed into his opponent and they struggled around the bar-room, the wounded man holding Wilson in a death-strong grip, at the same time endeavoring to draw his own revolver. During the struggle Wilson fired one shot from behind his back, the one that went through the pelvis and emerged near the femoral artery of the left leg. Moon, then becoming exhausted, fell upon the floor, when his antagonist fired the last and fatal shot, which, striking the unfortunate man immediately below the left ear, passed right through the neck, severing the fourth cervical vertebra in its course and afterward plowing the skin above the scapula, buried itself in the floor of the saloon. This shot must have caused instant death.

He then returned, got some sheep shears as witnesses, and started back to where Offield was, taking his needle gun with him. Offield ordered them to stop, but they paid no attention to him, when he walked over to a locust tree, took up his gun, which was loaded with buckshot, and killed Montgomery.

SITU

A Heroic Father.
New York Sun.
Giovanni Bepocchio, a master saddler of Turin, having been summoned to Nice by business engagements, took with him his only daughter, an intelligent child of seven, whose fondness for music prompted the father to purchase seats in the theater for the performance which terminated so tragically. He secured places in the front row of the gallery, and was occupying them, with his little girl when the alarm of fire rang through the house. Hastening to the gallery door, he found the crowd to the gallery door, but during the struggle the girl was torn from his grasp. By an almost superhuman effort he contrived to re-enter the gallery, by that time plunged in all around darkness, and, while groping about among the overturned seats, caught hold of a little girl, insensible from fright, whom he carried out into the street, fully believing her to be his own daughter. She proved, however, to be a strange child. Hastily setting her down upon the pavement he desperately fought his way for the second time into the burning theater, from which he never again emerged alive. His charred corpse was found, two days later, among the ruins of the gallery stairs.

Why Sunday Rest is Impossible.
London Truth.
One cause of the difficulty of reducing Sunday work to manageable proportions, both on omnibuses and trains, was pointed out at the recent meeting of the railway servants at Exeter Hall. Rev. Arthur Hall said that once when he asked a bus driver how he contrived to get rest on Sunday he received the frank but uncomplimentary reply, "We'd get a Sunday rest well enough if it wasn't for your self-advertising parsons. But as we're kept running all day to take people to hear Mr. Spurgeon and the rest of you it's quite impossible to knock off work." Since that time Mr. Hall says he has never entered a bus, cab or train on Sundays. But if the driver's remark was founded on fact the reverend gentleman should not enter a pulpit on that day.

Gallagher's Boy.
Boston Post.
Just what should induce a boy to leave two beer bottles under a board near the top of a flight of stairs, was the conclusion Mr. Gallagher proceeded to investigate after finding, on coming down stairs, with a hod of ashes, that his son had done so, and that the thing was not firm to step on, in consequence of which he had been slung a triple somersault down the stairs and had wrenched all his joints, nearly broken his neck, bruised himself in eighteen places, raked the skin off in nine, and got his mouth, ears, and hair and eyes full of ashes, beside getting a lot down the back of his neck and scattering the rest on the floor, so it took the house-maid two hours to clean them up. The boy took no pleasure in the investigation.

A Somnambulist's Walk.
Troy Press.
The other evening a Night Officer Lavery, of Waterford, was patrolling Broad street of that village, his attention was attracted by a flickering light that came down one of the side streets. He hastened to the spot, and was surprised to see an old citizen in his night robe, with a lighted candle in his hand, passing along the street, looking at the doors of houses as though in search of some particular locality. It was raining, and the drops of water falling on the candle nearly quenched it. Mr. Lavery accosted the man, but receiving no response, and going closer, saw he was walking in his sleep. The officer aroused the somnambulist pedestrian and accompanied him to his home.

By the timely use of Feltz's Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites, the nerves regain their vigor, and the brain becomes clear and powerful. Indigestion and habitual constipation almost always arise from weakness of the nerves and muscles of the stomach and bowels. In such cases, Feltz's Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites has proved itself of the greatest service by inducing healthy peristaltic action of the intestines. The evacuations soon become copious and healthy, without producing the effect of purgative medicines.

Haunted Man.
Debt, poverty and suffering haunted me for years, caused by a sick family and large bills for doctoring, which did no good. I was completely discouraged, until one year ago, by the advice of my pastor, I procured Hop Bitters and commenced their use, and in one month we were all well, and none of us have been sick a day since, and I want to say to all poor men, you can keep your families well a year with Hop Bitters for less than one doctor's visit will cost.—A Workingman.

ABOUT SOLES!

SOME PEOPLE THINK THEY HAVE no soles; all the rest think they have soles. News-agents educate the people and have intelligent souls. Fishmongers have stinking soles. Some Clergymen with the bell-book and candle-light think they can damn souls. Beecher ignores the doctrine of eternal brimstone and says it's questionable about the existence of souls. Subscribers who pay punctual for the Gazette have large souls while the dilatory ones have small souls, and the collectors have small walking to do to get their pay that they die of disease—the result of their souls. If one who takes their boots to WATSON'S ON THE PLAZA, have prime soles; if they take them elsewhere they have poor soles. If anyone thinks they have no soles, come to me, I will furnish you two good soles. One-legged men a specialty. I will make you like other folks by supplying you with a good double sole.

P. S.—Indiscreetness of footthought, who put no much confidence in appearance, would do well to call early and have them fixed; there are so many of that class who in their boots. June-1m
